

AFTER COLTON HOME

Great-Granddaughter Sues to Eject Mrs. Dahlgren.

WANTS RECEIVER APPOINTED

Little Helen Sacher, Six Years Old, Demands an Accounting, and Asks Court to Compel Aunt and Bartlett to Return the Will and Property Spirited Away to the District.

Another chapter was added yesterday to the litigation over the estate of the late Ellen M. Colton, widow of Gen. G. D. Colton, formerly of California, and once a partner of Collis P. Huntington and Senator Stanford.

A suit in ejectment was filed in the District Supreme Court in behalf of Helen Margaret Beatrice Sacher, the six-year-old great-granddaughter of Mrs. Colton, against Mrs. Caroline Colton Martin Dahlgren, a daughter of Mrs. Colton, to recover a half interest in the house at 1617 Connecticut avenue northwest and the rental value since February 10, 1905.

It is stated that the house rents for $1,000 a month, and the plaintiff asks for half of the aggregate sum, or $10,000.

The great-granddaughter also filed a bill in equity to have receivers appointed to take charge of the property, and to enjoin Mrs. Martin and Walter J. Bartlett, of San Francisco, from removing any of the personal property belonging to the estate from the District.

The petition alleges that the will was fraudulently taken away from the District, where Mrs. Colton was a resident for ten years prior to her death, and where all of her estate, valued at more than $500,000, was located. It is alleged that the will was taken to California, where she owned only a small summer cottage, valued at $5,000, for the purpose of preventing the great-granddaughter from contesting.

Spirited Property Away.

It is charged that Mrs. Martin, aided by John B. Dahlgren, whom she afterwards married, packed the expensive linen, silverware, rugs, etc., belonging to Mrs. Colton, in boxes, while she was ill, and shortly after her death sent them to the home of Mrs. Martin in Santa Cruz and to the Security Storage Company.

R. Golden Donaldson and H. W. Parker, who appeared for the great-granddaughter, say that shortly before the death of Mrs. Colton, while she was weak and feeble and unable properly to transact business, Mrs. Dahlgren sent to Bartlett bonds purported to be signed in blank by Mrs. Colton, valued, approximately, at $100,000. It is contended that no accounting was made to Mrs. Colton or to the executor of the estate.

The petitioner alleges that Mrs. Colton was induced to sign her name to a paper, the contents of which she never knew or understood, and which Mrs. Dahlgren, Bartlett, and Dahlgren claim is her last will, but which Mrs. Colton herself declared afterward was not her own.

Must Account for Valuables.

The court is asked to require Mrs. Martin and Mr. Bartlett to answer, under oath, what personal property they have belonging to the estate, and to turn it over to the receivers.

The court is also asked to decree that the defendants fraudulently took away Mrs. Colton's will from the District and to require them to return and file it with the Register of Wills.

BIG INCOME; NONE FOR WIFE.

Mrs. E. L. Thompson Sues Doctor for Divorce.

Charging her husband, Dr. Edward Leon Thompson, of 67 Missouri avenue northwest, with infidelity, drunkenness, and cruelty, Mrs. Mary Estelle Thompson yesterday began suit in the District Supreme Court for absolute divorce and alimony. She also asks to be permitted to resume her maiden name, Mary E. Wise.

Mrs. Thompson says she was married in this city on January 5, 1888, and that they lived together until September 7 last, when Dr. Thompson deserted her, and failed to contribute to her support. She claims that her husband has an annual income of about $4,000.

A suit for a limited divorce against his wife, Mary Estelle Thompson, was filed by Dr. E. L. Thompson in the District Supreme Court on Thursday last. Dr. Thompson charged his wife with deserting him and taking his household furniture. He also alleges that she treated him cruelly and unkindly.

William H. Hargrave yesterday filed a suit for absolute divorce from Mrs. Anna H. Hargrave, charging her with desertion. The couple were married at Zanesville, Ohio, in June, 1885. There is one child, a boy, for whose custody the father petitions. Mr. Hargrave says his wife left him in November, 1902.

FROM WOMAN'S VIEWPOINT.

Christmas plans are filling the heads of most of us, plans for those we love, and those to whom we are indebted, or think we are; but how many of these include something nice for the needy, for those who have no claim upon our attention save that of compassion?

If every woman who is able to do anything at Christmas included some bit of charity in her plan what a deal of good would be accomplished. There is so much misery in the world that more money will not relieve it seems a pity to add anything unnecessary to the burden, and financial aid is unnecessary because it needs only a small sum to actually support existence.

I said, one day, that if I had unlimited wealth I would take every blind man off the street and make his life endurable as far as creature comforts are concerned; and a practical business man tried to convince me that I would be adding nothing to their happiness since I was depriving them of independence. I was not convinced, because there must be humiliation in exposing their infirmities to the public, much weariness in waiting for patronage from careless men and women. A living would not be possible without the generosity of the few, who take no change and no wages.

There are plenty of diversions for these poor men, occupations that could be carried on at home and be absorbing; and if they could be made to produce money there would be no need of charity, of course. Unfortunately, blindness and business ability do not dwell together often. And money is only produced by the exercise of such ability. So I still maintain that blindness is the greatest appeal to charity, but not where it would reap the greatest rewards, more's the pity.

It is an actual fact that there are thousands of men and women who never do a blessed thing for charity. They are fair and just persons; most likely, honest in their dealings, but exacting the worth of every penny they put out. Some of them can afford to be generous, others, would have to make some sacrifice to give away the smallest sum, but the contributions of both classes would add much to the comfort of humanity if they could be induced to do their best. I know a family whose masculine head has given away one-tenth of his income ever since he was able to earn one.

He has prospered beyond his expectations, but his charity has grown accordingly, and he has bestowed it where it was really needed. Suppose we all did that—what would be the result? Why, we would be feeding and clothing the worthy instead of supplying pocket money to thieves. There is a vast army of dishonest men and women, able-bodied and living on the fat of the land at the expense of others who do not give willingly, and the victim of a robbery amounting to thousands of dollars, will willingly pocket the loss, but turn a cold shoulder upon a deserving case of charity, and money is not the only thing that would be acceptable. Everything that can be turned into money—castoff clothing, old magazines, and papers, even rags—is gladly received by some of the most earnest charities in the world. It does not cost so very much to be charitable, after all.

DAILY FASHION HINT.

Dainty Collar and Muff Sets.

A pretty fashion is the wearing of these dainty muffs and collarettes of chiffon, lace, and marabout feathers this season. For evening wear the foundation of either marabout or chiffon matches the cost material and is trimmed with touches of color that complement the color of the evening frock worn with it. A recent design shows such a muff and collarette made of smoke colored chiffon, with the ruffled edges trimmed with blue marabout feathers. Cord and tassel trimmings of interwoven silver and blue cords were also used.

PAINTINGS IN LIBRARY URGED CARDOZO CASE CONTINUED

Congress Asked to Purchase Big Canvas for Rotunda. Judge Anderson Sets December 7 as Date for Trial.

Contains Eighteen Life-sized Portraits of Legislators Prominent in Public Life Twenty Years Ago. Counsel Denies Assertion.

An organized effort is being made to induce Congress at the coming session to appropriate sufficient funds to purchase the painting in the Congressional Library building, which was executed about twenty years ago, and every member sat at the foot of the painting.

Out of the eighteen members of this committee, most of whom were widely known public men, but four are living to-day. The painting was executed about twenty years ago, and every member sat at the foot of the painting.

The canvass is about 12 feet long by 6 feet high, and has been on exhibition at the Riggs House for several years, attracting the attention of visitors from all over the world.

Capt. Walker, retired, U. S. N., is at the head of the movement that purposes to place the painting in the Congressional Library building. He is in favor of starting a collection of paintings, busts, and other objects of art having any connection either with the Library itself or the aim and object of that institution.

The bronze bust of Hancock that the United States of this city won at the Baltimore Saengerfest about three years ago, and which hangs in the ballroom of the Saengerfest clubhouse, will either be placed in a niche in the rotunda of the Library, or will find a niche in the park surrounding the Public Library.

TRIAL MARRIAGE A FAILURE.

Young Man Goes to Jail Rather Than Submit to Ceremony.

New York, Nov. 23.—Marriage on trial did not work out well with Patrick McArdle, twenty years old, of 323 East Thirty-eighth street, and Kate Hommel, seventeen years old, of 231 East Thirty-seventh street, who lived together for three weeks. The Children's Society stepped in and demanded that McArdle marry the girl. On his refusal he was arrested and confined in the Tombs. He pleaded guilty to a charge of assault, and when the option of marrying the girl or going to jail was given to him, he said he preferred the jail, in the Court of General Sessions this morning Judge Rosalsky sentenced him to the reformatory on Harts Island.

W. M. GEDDIS BADLY INJURED.

Washington Man Hurt in Runaway Near Jamestown.

W. M. Geddis, confidential secretary to Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Edwards, and Assistant Secretary of the National Jamestown Exposition Commission, was painfully and internally injured yesterday afternoon while driving from Williamsburg to Jamestown Island, his horses running away.

He was taken to Old Point, where he was placed on board the Washington steamer.

DENY COST OF VANITY

"Average People" Take Issue with Dr. Powers.

LAY BLAME ON THE TRUSTS

James S. O'Hagan, Plumbers' Secretary, Says Laboring Man Would Buy Cheaper if He Could—Mrs. Main Declares Poorer Classes Only Wish to Live Better.

Representatives of "the average people" yesterday took issue with the declaration of Dr. Le Grand Powers, agricultural statistician of the Census Bureau, that vanity and pride have caused the recent big increase in the price of foodstuffs.

James S. O'Hagan, secretary of the Plumbers' Union, spoke for the laboring man, and Mrs. Charlotte Emerson Main, the newly elected president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, for women. Both were positive that the "common people" would live on a simpler scale were it possible under prevailing conditions.

Said Mr. O'Hagan: "The average individual, or the workman, subscribes to the shinbone theory of Edward Atkinson. He prefers the shinbone because it makes more soup and has more nourishment and substance than high-priced and prepared meats. But to-day you can't get it at the grocery's as you used to, and it is comparatively as costly as any other meat. This is not vanity or pride. Dr. Powers is away off. Pork, always the poor man's meat, is at present more costly than steel."

Carry Their Own Supplies.

"Workmen don't want everything they buy sent home. That is a mistake. You can go down to Center Market, or, for that matter, any other market, and see them with baskets on their arms getting their supply of foodstuffs and taking it with them. Some of them carry baskets to work and stop at the market or the grocery's on their way home. If they don't, their wives and children do. A majority of the women daily seen on the cars returning home from market loaded down with bundles are the wives and mothers of laboring men."

"If I don't pride that we have to pay $25 a month for a house that is barely fit to live in, the same house that we only paid $15 or $16 for not more than ten years ago? We don't live in residences—palatial homes—we can't even afford modern houses in an ordinary neighborhood. Increased rentals are not due to pride or vanity."

"It is not pride or vanity that causes us to have goods sent. We will carry home. It is not the workmen or average people who have brought about the expense of delivery service, but the so-called better classes—salaried and professional men—as designated by Dr. Powers."

Costs No More to Be Proud.

"If you go to any green grocer or other dealer and buy a steak or any other article and carry it home you pay just as much for it as you would if you had it sent. Therefore, if the average people have to pay their share in the expense of this delivery service, notwithstanding they might just as well share the benefit."

"It is a well-known fact that in country towns, even those close to big cities, where they have no delivery service and no ice chests or other sanitary arrangements, and where the consumer buys in bulk, the same prices prevail for foodstuffs as they do in Washington and other cities."

"It is not that we demand the best of everything so much as it is that the cheaper grades in many staple foodstuffs are not obtainable. They have been forced out by the trusts and big dealers because there was not sufficient profit in them. Take for instance brown sugar, the cheapest grade of that staple article. It can be bought to-day but at few places, and then at the prevailing price of the granulated article. The same is true of the shinbone, or so-called soup meat."

"Living in democratic America, the laboring man has a perfect right to feel that he is as good as anybody else. He does not try to live like a millionaire, or even better than the average, but he does want to live as the average man lives, not in affluence, but with the comfort of a reasonable share of the necessities, and a bright and cozy home."

She Blames the Trusts. "I certainly don't think that the increase in the cost of living is due to pride or vanity on the part of the average man," said Mrs. Main. "In my opinion it is due to the increase of price in the original or raw article by the big controlling interests, the trusts—the beef trust, the sugar trust, and all of them whose names are too familiar. For instance, the increase in the cost of meats has not been made by the middleman, small dealer, or retailer; they pay more for it. The increase is due to the original price charged them by the slaughterers."

"I agree with Dr. Powers in a number of instances, and believe that many of his statements are true, but the average people, the poorer classes, if you will, should not be called vain and proud because they wish to live better than the peasants of Europe. Conditions are altogether different. There they may never hope to get away from the prejudice of caste. Here it is the reverse, and it cannot be expected that they should care to have the difference eliminated or curtailed."

Salaried Men Hardest Hit. "I also think that those who are on a stated income or salary, the better or professional class by imputation, are the ones who suffer through the increase in prices, and not the laboring man. It is a widely known fact that the wages of the laboring men have increased proportionately, or at least almost so, with the increase in the cost of living."

"It is the men who are in positions that bring a stated salary who suffer. Take, for instance, men in the government employ. The same salary obtains in the office occupied by them that prevailed years ago. This is in large measure true of government clerks and army and navy officers."

Masons, carpenters, and all tradesmen have obtained increased pay and shorter hours, while the salaried class and all those living on a stated income receive no more than they did ten or fifteen years ago, and a number of instances can be cited where their hours of labor are longer."

"It is also well to note that they receive no increased compensation for working overtime. Of course, increased prices are of but small moment to the rich."

Father O'Hara's Views.

Father O'Hara, teacher of economics at Georgetown University, said: "Increased cost of food stuffs and other commodities is due to the general proclivity of the country and not to so trivial a thing as vanity. I don't think the difference in price between the manufacturer and the consumer is due to more extravagant demands on the middleman for fancy packages and delivery of goods, but rather to a general increase all along the line, lying principally with the controlling interest of the raw materials."

ABOUT PLAYERS AND PLAYS.

The Hammerstein grand opera season at the Manhattan Opera House will begin December 2 with a performance of Bellini's "I Puritani," in which the leading parts will be taken by Mlle. Regina Pinkert, the soprano, and Bonel, the tenor, of whom such great things are predicted. "Don Giovanni" will be the second opera to be produced, on December 5, followed by "Faust" on the 7th, and again on the 8th, the latter performance being at popular prices.

The bad manners and bad temper of one usher in the Belasco Theater at Pittsburg, in combination with the carelessness of another, have caused the management to be made defendant in a suit for $1,000 damages by Mr. James Garrigan. The latter and his wife were placed in the wrong seats when they went to the theater, and later were rudely hustled out when the persons who held the proper coupons came along.

Three grand opera artists, of whom great things are expected, on the strength of their European reputations, will be heard at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, on Monday, when Herr Conrad will open his season with a performance of "Romeo and Juliet." Miss Geraldine Farrar will appear as Juliet, M. Rouselle as Romeo, and M. Simard as Mercutio, all for the first time in this country. Pol Plancon will be the Friar Lawrence.

Irma La Pierre has just been assigned by Manager Savage to play the title role of "The College Widow" in the company that is doing the Ade skit on the Southern circuit. Miss La Pierre has played leading parts with J. H. Stoddard, Macklyn Arbuckle, and Orrin Johnson. She began her career as a child in Augustin Daly's company, playing in "The Geisha."

A feature of the great benefit performance to be given in New York on December 11 for W. H. Barnabee and Marie Stone will be the presentation of W. S. Gilbert's famous, but infrequently seen burlesque, on "Hamlet." Robert Mantell, Richard Carle, Peter Dalley, and Sam Bernard will be in the cast. Other distinguished people who have offered services for the benefit are Henry Miller, Mrs. Fiske, Margaret Anglin, May Irwin, Blanche Ring, William Gillette, Rose Stahl, and Anna Held.

Richard Mansfield is now said to have added a professional osteopath to his suite of personal attendants.

Manager Henry W. Savage has put another prima donna on his "Madam Butterfly" list. She is Miss Ethel Houston, a contralto, who will alternate with Miss Harriet Behne in the role of Suzuki, the maid.

The growing feeling in New York against so-called sacred concerts on Sunday night has led the managers of the New York Theater to abandon the Sunday night entertainment at that house in order to avoid the unpleasantness of a visit from the police. These entertainments are said to have netted the management $20,000 a year. The trouble with most of the New York sacred concerts is that they are neither sacred nor concert, but variety shows of a not very high order.

Manager Harry Rapley, of the National Theater, is in New York this week trying to add to his list of good things for the latter part of the season.

Yvette Guilbert and Albert Chevalier appeared together for the last time in America at an afternoon performance in New York yesterday for the benefit of a hospital.

It is getting tiresome to catalogue the actors who are deserting (?) the legitimate stage for vaudeville these days. Hardly a day goes by without an addition to the list. Tyrone Power and his wife, Edith Crane, are the latest.
